Mathematical models are important in the sciences and engineering. Students are given training that focuses on the applications of mathematics and mathematical modelling in the sciences and engineering. Skills in the use of sophisticated mathematical tools and in computer programming are essential in this regard and are given due emphasis.